

The corporate and contractual framework within which organizations operate can be described as business law. Business law ultimately aims to secure this legal framework, keeping it up-to-date and making sure it meets the needs of organizations and their owners, creditors, consumers, and public.

Danna McKitrick's legal advisors offer thorough counsel and project follow-through at competitive rates.

From the occasional advice and document review that businesses need, to on-going advice where we become "outsourced general counsel," we meet the legal needs of scores of companies and not-for-profit organizations every day.

We help you resolve today's problems and avoid tomorrow's.

New perspectives allow you to consider tax issues choosing the best business structure (sole-proprietorship, partnership, corporation, limited liability company, etc.), protecting your company's interests—personnel, assets, intellectual property, etc.—and meeting regulatory, administrative and licensing requirements, to name just a few.

Our business transactional attorneys collaborate with our litigators who share their practical experiences about disputes, arguments, and court precedence that add to our ability to provide outstanding preventative advice. This effective team approach is a key element that inspires our clients' repeat business.

Danna McKitrick's legal perspective matched with unparalleled business perspective enhances your business. We help businesses plan wisely and make decisions consistent with the goals of the business and its owners.
